Why Britain Needs an Animal Abuse Register

Animal Abuse Register

- Cost Effective
- Protects Society from Animal Abusers
- Those who abuse animals lose right to work with children, animals, and the vulnerable
- Longer Sentences for those who abuse animals
- Gives a voice to those who cannot speak for themselves
- Allows reporting
- Allows identification of those at risk.
- Opportunity for rehabilitation

Impact of Animal Cruelty

Animal cruelty impacts all of us. It is a crime whereby, if the person is not rehabilitated it can lead to more horrific crimes against a person. By stopping those who commit animal cruelty, it protects UK society from the most violent individuals and it can give the person convicted a chance at a new life.

Once convicted and it is ordered by the judge the individual will be entered on the register for the stated period of time. During this time they cannot work with children, animals, or the vulnerable. Also during this time they are receiving support and serving their sentence. By giving them the support and tools needed to cope, it is hoped they can “turn their lives around,” and become productive members of

Animal Abuse Register Makes Us Safer

The Register is Self-Funding

Two Models for Funding

Two models exist to fund the register. First model is through a license fee. A small fee will be charged and once a pet is bought the buyer will have to show the license to demonstrate they are not on the register

Second model is the point of sale with employer check. Under this model the individual will need to produce id and proof of address. A check will be made against the register. If the person is on the register then they will not be offered the job or they will not be allowed to purchase the animal.
